A QUEER GIFT.

Novel Restrictions Under Which Miss Carter Left Money to Her Town.

WILMINGTON, Mass., Nov. 27.—The town fathers are wondering what they shall do with a gift from a benevolent old lady of 70 years, Miss Sabra Carter, who has imposed such novel restrictions as to make the gift a white elephant on their hands. Miss Carter proposes to give the town 50 shares of stock, paying about 10 per cent. interest, she to have the interest on the stock while she lives, and after her decease the interest to be expended as follows:

The income of 10 shares purchased of the Lombard Investment Company, for which she paid $1,000, is to be used for "the painting of houses in Wilmington for those who shall apply for it," one or two each year, "who do not keep a dog and have not kept one for two years, and who have been members of a temperance society for the same period of time, and are not in the personal use of tobacco." If there are no applications for a coat of paint gratis, the income may be used one-half for ornamenting the common and the other to beautify the cemetery.

The income on 20 shares in the Denver Electric Lighting Company, which were bought for $3,178, is to be devoted to two purposes, one-half the income to go toward the purchase for the public library of scientific books, works of travel, etc., and the remainder to be devoted to lectures on similar subjects. These lectures must be given on Wednesday afternoons, when the travelling is in good condition and school children can conveniently attend. If there is sufficient accommodation, people from neighboring towns may be invited.

Miss Carter makes several provisions with 30 shares in the Howard State Bank of Kansas, which shares, she says, may be worth about $250. One-fourth of the income of these shares she sets apart for renovating marbles in the cemetery, an eighth to be used in keeping the family lots in good order, a fourth to be expended in planting trees by the wayside, and the remaining fourth for furnishing settees to be placed by the highways where travelers may rest.

Grace Resigns as President.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Ex-Mayor William R. Grace has resigned the presidency of the Grant Monument Association. He says his action was prompted by the fact that some time ago, while in Washington, he learned that during his absence the executive committee proposed electing certain new members of the association. Mr. Grace considered this an illegal proceeding, as when any vacancies occurred they could only be filled by members of the association.
